

Divine Energy: God Beyond Us, Within Us, Among Us

Donal Dorr suggests that divine energy is all around us. God is as close to us as the air we breathe. The God who is beyond us: The first section of the book is an exploration how we can experience God present in nature and in various everyday human experiences such as falling in love, being healed, having a baby, or struggling for personal or political liberation. The God who is within us: The prophetic Holy Spirit touches the human spirit, bringing inspiration, hope, joy, peace and life energy. The prophetic Spirit of the Bible challenges and comforts us. This Spirit also works through other religions and touches us through religious symbols, intuitions, dreams, and the energies of nature. The God who is among us: In this section, Dorr explores how Jesus shows us how to be authentically human. He goes on to offer a fresh view of redemption and resurrection as a transformation of energy in Jesus and now in us. Dorr next engages in dialogue with New Age thinking, suggesting that authentic divine energy is not about gaining power over others but about ability to bring healing and hope to people and to our world, though action and through prayer. The book concludes with a contemporary creed that links Dorr's three powerful themes in soaring language of praise and commitment.
