

A Fathers Honor

This is a true story of how a father who loved his two sons reacted to their and his own pain of adultery, divorce, pregnancy, deceit, and lies. The story tells of his life as he loses his wife and sons, his home, and his honor due to his wife's affair with her boss at the U.S. Postal Service. He tells of his sons' pain as the world they knew crumbled apart. In blunt detail, after time and time again trying to get people to listen to him about how his sons were hurting, he took action on his own to uphold his and his sons' honor. The phone calls to Mr. Catman. The walls he ran up against at the local post office. The lies Mr. Catman told. His arrest and incarceration by a prosecutor who cared only about headlines. The story shows the lowest depths of despair to the highest peaks, when after all was said and done, the author achieved his goals of custody of his children and proved wrong the lies that were told about him. The love he has for his sons is indeed a Fathers Honor.
