

Alien Challenge

With the advent of computers, internet and satellites; the permutation and combination of ideas started accelerating at a very fast pace because the isolation of thinkers was broken down, but the basic tools of perception and of formation of knowledge, like the waves of various frequencies and wavelengths, appear to be inadequate, to understand the layers and vastness of space, in which most of the science fiction stories begin and end. The why? of the small blast, called Big Bang, remains more of a mystery than explanation, as much as the abracadabra explanation of creation offered by religions of almost all hues and color. Two things, out of, may be more than a million, may be getting established in the information base of mankind. Firstly, that a lot of thinking must have gone into the creation of this highly sophisticated universe; secondly, if god created it, he must have done a lot of dance without music. After reading this book, one may wonder, whether the perceived and inferential universe is just an illusion or reality of waves. Readers would also tend to think that, the stuff, which god is made up of, is nothing else but very complex absolute void, the thing, which is present everywhere, and is affected by every single movement in the universe of matter, energy and waves. There ought to be some relationship between matter and void, otherwise a vast universe of our perception wont have come into existence. That brings into focus the greatest challenge, alien to human beings and also alien to possible aliens, wherever they may be, the challenge of creating matter out of absolute space and also the challenge of total destruction of matter, without the side effect of energy, again abracadabra to the extreme.
