

The Testimony of an IVF Guinea Pig

Sandra Crashley's research into the test tube baby pioneers, Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards made her aware of the dangers and ethics of what is now the thriving billion-dollar IVF industry. In 1970 a straightforward minor hospital treatment in the UK turned into a nightmare of medical abuse as Sandra, age 24, was caught up in the experiments of the pioneers of IVF who needed healthy ovum for their work. The removal of most of her ovaries left her body shocked into early menopause and rapid aging. She is now almost permanently confined to a wheelchair. Sandra raises questions that should be of concern to all of us, but through all her work and research she demonstrates the faith in God that brought her to a new understanding and acceptance of her condition. It made her realise that she must speak out. This book is a brave and beautiful account of a life well lived and a continual struggle on behalf of those who suffer and against those who sought to take advantage of the plight of the disadvantaged to promote themselves and their reputations. The latter, if they ever read it, will not take kindly to the way in which they are portrayed, but it is an honest and accurate view of the dark side of medical fame. Emeritus Professor Campbell Murdoch MD(Glas) PhD(Dund) FRNZCGP(Dist)FRCGP Sandra's book demands we consider more maturely the origins and present underbelly of the assisted reproductive technology industry whose customers have fed the massively profitable global enterprise and whose failures are silenced by stigma. Susan Bewley MA MD FRCOG Professor of Complex Obstetrics, Kings College London
