

Pension Reform in Europe

Since the Federal Trust published The Pension Time Bomb in Europe in 1995 the debate has raged about what actions must be taken to cap the escalating costs of non-funded state schemes in the EU. More recently the Federal Trust has re-examined the problem in Can Europe Pay for its Pensions? report. Its conclusions are more optimistic based on the developing partnership between modified state schemes and private pension provision for all. In this volume, the European Commission publishes its proposals on occupational pensions which are discussed by leading experts, along with new statistical information about the impact of aging populations on public pension systems.
