

If Mountains Could Talk: What Would They Say?

The haunting beauty of the Great Smokies, the gentle fells of Englands Lake District that captured Wordsworths heart, the forbidding crags of Scotlands Highlands, the rugged Rockies-mountains inspire and sometimes intimidate us. Why did God create mountains, and how does he use them to be present in our lives and communicate with us? In the Psalms, David sees that nature speaks all the time about the wonder, majesty, and glory of the great creator God. With mountains leading the way, everything in our universe eagerly awaits the opportunity to tell us about our amazing creator. Like God, mountains are unmovable and unchanging, giving us a perspective on whats truly important. They remain steadfast in a world cluttered with cell phones, computers, busy schedules, and bad news from seemingly every corner.

Journey with Don Hull as he explores what else God reveals to us about himself through mountains. Even if you cant actually scale a peak, you can discover the kinds of insights and instructions that await us if only we will open our hearts to these glorious monuments of Gods creation. Mountains invite us to explore, climb, grow, play, rest, and find comfort. Let them challenge you and draw you closer to God.
