

Essential Accounting for Investment Banking Part 3

This final handbook will introduce the last missing component of the three statements the Cashflow Statement and paints a full picture of how accounting is able to link these three representational components to record almost all financial information of a fully-functioning business operation. GIUP Handbook 3 (Part 3 of Essential Accounting for Investment Banking Analyst series) provides: A refreshing practical introduction to the Cashflow Statement, illustrating the importance of CASH and the reason behind which investment bankers often quote CASH IS KING. We introduce the classifications of different types of Cashflow and their drivers. We give a detailed explanation on how cash movements hit the balance sheet and introduce the 4 Rule. We go through an entire comprehensive example demonstrating the reconciliation of a Cashflow statement and its associated Balance sheet. We wrap everything up by linking all three financial statements together by focusing on one complete example, working from scratch, step by step from start to finish, applying principals learnt from all three handbooks. Finally, we end by giving a full summary of the basic accounting series by reflecting back on the key knowledge points learnt within the entire series in particular, the key points that are highlighted by investment bankers in real life interview scenarios.
