

PROOF The Christian god does not exist

If you want convincing proof that god does not exist all you have to do is look at the lives of those who believe. It is simply not true that the existence (or non-existence) of a god, invisible to all senses, cannot be proven, not true that we cannot test for god. When the god in question is defined as being dynamically involved with humanity and has promised specific results from this interaction we can test for the promised results. We do this in science and medicine. We determine that a black hole, planet or disease exists or does not exist within their individual systems by the results or symptoms that would be displayed if they did exist. If there is no flame, heat, light or smoke, there is no fire. If the evidence conforms to the gods promise then we can assume he exists. If the evidence demonstrates the predicted results do not happen then we can conclude the god does not exist. The sacred texts of Christianity clearly document the promises made by their all-powerful god and since Christianity does not produce results commensurate with the significance of these promises and the alleged power of this god it is fair to conclude the Christian god does not exist. While Christians disagree and find excuses for gods failure they are not credible witnesses. They do not live as if they believe and it is impossible to determine which of the thousands of competing versions of Christianity, if any, represents the truth. Christianity is in too much chaos to be relied upon to clarify the absence of results. The truth is, we can test for the Christian god and in doing so we find he does not exist.
