

Ten Powerful Things to Say to Your Kids: Creating the relationship you want with the most important people in your life

Whether you're a parent, teacher, grandparent, counselor, or school volunteer, you will find practical, down-to-earth ideas for creating remarkable relationships with the children in your life. You will think about your conversations in a new light, creating deeper, more meaningful connections with your kids so you can support them in becoming confident, resilient, and effective young people. From the chapter What You Say Matters: Your words and conversations create your reality, your future, and your relationships.... Your words have the power to hurt as well as to nurture. The pattern of your conversations creates an environment that can be healthy or detrimental. The primary conversations that surround your children are your conversations both with them directly and with others while your children are present. And those are the conversations you have the power to change. The book empowers parents to be more conscious of what they say and how they speak to their kids and provides simple, straightforward ideas that parents, teachers, grandparents and others can put into practice and see immediate results. As father to two wonderful adults and grandfather to thirteen in his blended family, Axtell knows it's never too late to work on creating great relationships with the kids in your life.
