Not illustrated. 1846 Excerpt: ...ornaments of a highly architectural villa, as the honest, dignified, plain farmer himself would, if tricked out in the fashionable fin. ery of the reigning Paris exquisite. The beauty of propriety is a species of moral beauty even in houses and clothes. There should be a kind of homely country-like air about every genuine farm-house. It ought at the first glance to be recognised as belonging to the open meadows, orchards and pastures, that surround, and the fresh luxuriant trees that wave over it. It should be neat and strong, and capacious, and comfortable. If something is wanted beyond this--and we are sure our farming countrymen will more and more desire a manifestation of the agreeable about their houses--then should something ornamental combine itself with the most important and useful features of the house. Let a veranda be added, which may be adorned, not so much with expensive pillars, as with beautiful and flagrant climbing plants. Let the porch be made a suitable covering to the principal entrances. Let the gables be enriched with simple ornaments, and the chimney stacks be built in some pleasing forms. These are the first points that really demand attention in a farmers house, which we wish to raise to its highest expression of fitness and beauty. Some examples of this kind of rural architecture we hope to be able to offer at no distant time. These trifling hints may perhaps lead some agricultural friend to consider what is essential to the character of a farm-house, and thus at least prevent his marring the beauty of simplicity and propriety.
