Not illustrated. 1912 Excerpt: ...on a portion of this report. I called the attention of the other members of the committee to the report, stating that this particular paragraph was only an exception, and when they understood it in that way it was agreed to by all. I also wrote to the different members of the association who discussed the question, and when they understood the meaning of it, they agreed that it was practically satisfactory. The report of last year upon which there was discussion, under which it was returned to the committee, reads: For stations where but a small amount of freight is handled, etc., (reading this portion of the report). That is the paragraph on which the convention had the question resubmitted to the committee, and when it was understood that way it was not taken fully into consideration, I judge from the discussion, but it stated that where but a small amount of freight is handled, a house track back of the station is not desirable. The committee fully agrees that a track back of the station is not desirable except in special cases, but in certain cases it is quite desirable. The convention seemed to think that the report was intended to convey the meaning that there should be a track back of the station in all cases, which was not the intent and meaning if the committees report at all. Mr. Penwell:--I was one of the members referred to in this discussion last year, and after having some correspondence with Mr. Fake during the year, and after reading his proposed supplemental report I wrote him to the effect that I was ready to recommend the report with the additional paragraph that he has just read. There is only one exception that I could now take to that, and that, as was mentioned in my letter to Mr. Fake,
