

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission 2012 Agenda

This is a timely hearing as the CFTC is facing a number of issues of concern to our constituents. First and foremost, the CFTC's agenda for the coming year must be its investigation into the collapse of MF Global and its missing customer funds. Thousands of customers have yet to receive nearly 30 percent of the funds that MF Global should have held in segregated accounts. While I commend the Trustee for working quickly to trace the thousands of complex transactions that occurred during MF Global's final days, the fact remains that many customers have yet to be made whole. Farmers and ranchers across the country continue to face hardships because of their missing funds and have lost confidence in the futures system. This raises several key questions about customer protections in place and the CFTC's role in futures markets. Although the CFTC has gained new authority over the swaps market under the Dodd-Frank Act, the MF Global collapse demonstrates the importance of CFTC's oversight responsibilities in futures market.
