

The Grant Seekers Directory to Higher Education Funding

The Grant Seekers Directory to Higher Education Funding includes more than 100 pages of federal and private funding opportunities and advice which we help you accomplish what one veteran grantwriter calls her role as a Dream Maker. But times are tough for the Dream Makers. Federal funding for many programs is drying up or has disappeared completely. And, there is a constant turnover of giving in the private philanthropic sector, with many family and independent foundations changing their focus or just shutting down operations. Remember, there are roughly 70,000 grant-making organizations that dispense about $450 billion in grants. And this directory is a good starting point for the clever grant writer or administrator who doesn't want to spend long weekend nights hunting through lists of Internet URLs for just the right funding opportunity. What's Inside: The Grant Seekers Directory to Higher Education Funding is broken into two parts: Higher Ed Federal Funding and Higher Ed Private Funding. Both sections provide a wide collection of active federal and private funders. The objective of this report is to help you identify the funders, both public and private, most likely to support your organization. Keep in mind that you don't have to be Detective Columbo to find a grant or Shakespeare to write a successful proposal. But you do need to get started, and The Grant Seekers Directory to Higher Education Funding will provide you with a first step in your hunt for grant funding. Who should read: Grant writers, administrators, non-profit organizations, family and community foundation, and grant-seekers.
