

ATHEISM: Christs Finest Creation: a spiritual ghost haunts an Atheists heart to expose how the innate human soul was conquered then caged by Christianity

There is reason beyond science for the creation of an Atheist. Most children inherit religion from their ancestors. Family beliefs run deep in the heart of a child, and when it is a moral conviction to a devoted family, Atheism casts a very emotional light on Christianity. The heartfelt response from a lifelong Atheist is far more profound than from the adult Christian who has logically abandoned his Church out of respect for scientific fact. Childhood religious indoctrination is a powerful force that is as intense to the child raised by a loving, caring Atheist family as it is to the most devout Christian. For our author, living as an Atheist was a defining challenge during the 50s when the Cold War raged and Atheists were labeled Communist. The challenge expanded when he was 18 and his father began an agonizing, three-year, cancer-driven trip and died at 51. Twenty-years later his life exploded with the hiking death of his only child. This is a love story of a lifelong Atheist and his wife: a Catholic who abandoned her church as a teen. Theirs is a spiritual search to give purpose to their sons death. Their quest is described in true-life anecdotes that reach far beyond the confines of organized religions to the ultimate destination of the truly free essence of an innate human soul: A spirit that could never survive in the closeted, masculine environment of a male God and His Son.
