

Through the First Antarctic Night: Centennial Edition

Narrative of the first expedition to spend the long Antarctic night below the Antarctic Circle. The Belgica was icebound in the Bellinghousen Sea for over a year, becoming a virtual laboratory of human endurance for its 19-member multinational crew. The careers of both of the future discoverers of the Poles--Roald Amundson (South Pole 1911) and Frederick A. Cook (North Pole 1908) were joined in this expedition. This account by Cook, the ship's surgeon, was first published in 1900. New color photos and essays by two Polar historians comprise the Centennial reprint edition.
