Relationships, plural, in fact, are never fulfilled, because they are incapable of doing so. The word is a verb, meaning movement. A relationship is never finite! It is a moment of absolute reality. My first relationship was with Judy. We were both four years old, it was 1954. Where she is now, where she has been, what her last name is now, is of no consequence. Every time something brings her to mind, whatever relationship I have now, it is pushed aside, and we are once again, together, and we are again kissing each other, hugging each other, on her front lawn. My mom gave me a very old picture of us kissing, about 20 years ago. My mom passed in 2005. She is still alive in my mind. That picture is still hanging on my office wall, and I have reproduced it in several of my books. As I am writing this to you, Judy, and I, our relationship, is alive and well. True, the picture is a black and white still life, about two and a half inches wide, by four high. Not everyone in this world prefers to have a close, personal relationship, from a betrothed point of view. There are those who prefer to be in a special friends relationship. This keeps the government out of your personal life. This is my personal preference. The quality of any relationship, marriage mate, special friend, friend, family, is what both partners put into it, and do not put into it. Then there are those who have many good acquaintances, and some not so good, and stay on that comfort level. Those who will have nothing to do with any social contacts, it is by choice, and/or circumstance. The result of a merciless event, painful betrayal, or loss of someone who was empowered by you, to be allowed a great intimacy. This person, who dwelled in your heart, was suddenly taken away. Not by choice! Some will fill the void, fill in a niche, or carry a great void, with alcohol, drugs, or stay in a emotional state of denial, and keep running away from relationship reality. Relationships are a part of the reality of life, and the reality of life, can be brutally cruel. Yet, it will be what you make of it. If these stop running, just to catch their breath, to stop but for a moment, it will catch up to them! All of these scenarios have a relationship with something. you will find it in this Touched...Relationship Fulfillment series.

What you will find, is what you need. and things greater than that. If you are in a fulfilled relationship, you will make it better. Then there is the rest of us. A relationship is always a living thing. the differences are at two levels. The first involves the differences between you, and your companion. The second, the numbers.

How many of us are filled with great reward, working the problems that cause conflict, and result in continued happiness, and content. Or suicides. These conclusions based on public domain records. New marriages, new separations, new divorces, a record of sold properties that are owned by cohabitating partners. You are now in very good hands, and are not to fret where you may find yourself, in this three book series. I am a messenger, from the Highest Authority! A guide to who you are, and what category you find yourself in. In competitive sports, even the best of the best, have to continue to hone their skills, through a rigorous practice schedule. The reward is when you know you are ready. I specifically address the human condition, of relationships with other human beings. If you learn to throw a curveball, what you are reading is a figurative analogy, or parable. The Touched series of books are very different, in every way. You think that you will discover an answer that is character specific? that it is you? You will, but not because you found it. It is because I have already found you!
