

The Public Speaking Handbook: Your Guide to Speaking that's Heard, Felt and Acted Upon

This book is about you. It's about how to get the passionate you into your public speaking, instead of some idea of how a business person should give a presentation. The more you can ignite your passion for your presentation, the more products or services you will sell, or funds you will raise. Those who succeed know that essentially your audience buys you, then what you're offering or asking for. By using simple acting techniques you can become a compelling speaker. The thirty-nine pages of this handbook contain fresh and original exercises that will bring out the best in you and your message. This unique approach will still any problems you have—there's a whole section on the fear of public speaking. The author, Fred Rivera, says, There is a speaker in all of us. Who among us doesn't want to be heard?
